THE UNION LEADER, MANCHESTER, N.H. — Tuesday, February 10, 1987

Tambo Gets an Unwarranted Boost

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

WHEN RONALD REAGAN was fighting the Communists and their fellow travelers in the Screen Actors Guild, he carried a loaded

Smith and Wesson revolver to protect himself against anonymous threats to end his Hollywood career by throwing acid in his face. As president of the guild he went to Washington with a previous president, George Murphy, to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee about Communist infiltration of Hollywood organizations. So we may assume that Reagan knows plenty about Communist maneuverings in committees that they aspire to dominate for their own Marxist-Leninist ends.

What a pity, then, that Reagan did nothing to forestall the meeting the other day between Oliver Tambo, the head of the Communist-infiltrated African National Congress, and Secretary of State George Shultz. Between the acid-throwing of Reagan's Hollywood days and the "necklacing" (setting fire to a kerosene-filled rubber tire around a victim's neck) there can't be any moral difference. Tambo, both before and during his meeting with Shultz, refused to repudiate the practice of necklacing by his followers. As a condition for the meeting Tambo should have been required to disassociate himself from the statement of Winnie Mandela, wife of Nelson Mandela, an ANC founder, that "together, hand in hand, with our boxes of matches and our necklaces, we shall liberate this country."

To do him justice, Shultz made it clear that the United States would not condone ANC violence in South Africa. But in meeting with Tambo, who has less of a following among South African blacks than Buthelezi, the chief of the Zulus, Shultz conferred upon Tambo and the ANC a dignity that is certainly unwarranted.

Michael Armacost, who is Shultz's undersecretary of state for political affairs, has said the

OLIVER TAMBO

Shultz-Tambo meeting was set up to "facilitate a dialogue between the government of South Africa and the legitimate voice of the black community." Armacost's notion of "legitimacy" is very strange indeed. What is "legitimate" about necklacing? What is "legitimate" about Tambo's support of violent revolution?

Tambo has said that "members of the ANC fully understand why both the ANC and the SACP (South African Communist Party) are two hands in the same body, why they are the two pillars of our revolution." Just last November Tambo, in amplifying his statement that "we have to make our country ungovernable," said the "ANC and the SACP have common objectives... the seizure of power."

Shultz cannot feign unawareness of Tambo's sentiments. Howie Phillips, the head of the Conservative Caucus and chairman of the Coalition Against ANC Terrorism, has deluged the State Department with damaging Tambo quotes. Rep. Jack Kemp, in addressing his own criticism to Shultz, has asked a pertinent question: "Has the ANC promised to abandon violence or Communist affiliations in return for this unprecedented meeting with the American secretary of state?"

Reagan has found George Shultz useful in dealing with our West European allies. But Shultz's State Department has given very little support to the Reagan Doctrine when it comes to countering the Communists in Africa and Central America. Instead of tackling his State Department head on, Reagan has often chosen to by-pass it by reliance on the National Security Council. Conservatives have wondered why no effort has been made to clean out the State Department in the past six years. Now, with the Democrats controlling both houses of Congress, it is too late. Shultz would have more partisans on Capitol Hill than anyone in the White House.

The difficulties of a housecleaning have been fully explained by Stanton Evans in an essay he has written for a forthcoming book, "Steering the Elephant: How Washington Works." Evans points to the power of a "permanent, unelected government." There are some three million civilian government employees. When a new President comes into office he may replace only about a tenth of 1 percent of the three million. The huge remainder will still control the all-important in-basket input.

According to Evans, the worst agency in making it an uphill struggle for an incoming administration is the State Department. "The bureaucrats who run the department," says Evans, "clearly believe they inhabit a world unto themselves. I am informed they have a nickname for political appointees: 'the Christmas help.' Their feeling is that government policy should be set by 'professionals' and they react with annoyance to elections and other incidental factors that intrude on their 'professional' operations."

Shultz is not going to fire Armacost, his undersecretary for political affairs, or Chester Crocker, his assistant secretary for African affairs. But Reagan might gain some ground by making a personal repudiation of the "legitimacy" of the ANC to claim spokespersonship for all the South African blacks.

THE UNION LEADER, MANCHESTER, N.H. — Tuesday, February 10, 1987

A Look at the African National Congress

By ROBERT MORRIS

INCREASINGLY, Big Media, some church leaders, much of academia, and sometimes even the State Department are speaking of the African National Congress with respect, as if its opposition to apartheid alone deifies the ANC and its leadership in the eyes of all decent people.

But, let us have a look at the African National Congress:

Its Secretary General, generally the key man in Communist parties, is Alfred Nzo. In March of last year, Nzo addressed Moscow's 27th World Congress. That is the body that establishes worldwide Soviet policy. He is vice president of Moscow's World Peace Council and has received the Soviet Order of Friendship of Peoples.

Also a top man is Joe Slovo, white Lithuanian Comintern agent, chairman of the South African Communist party who is commander of the military arm of the ANC, Umkhonto we Sizwe. That organization has been committing more acts of terror with fiery, rubber-tire "necklaces" and other ghoulis measures than Gadhafi and all other terrorists put together.

THE CIA HAS ISSUED a biography of the 19 pro-Soviet leaders of the ANC. Two of these officials, Martin Hani and Cassius Make, received military training in the Soviet Union. Two others, Francis Meli and Anthony Mongalo, have close ties to East Germany, which supplies intelligence and security support for pro-Soviet regimes. My information on Hani is that he is the political commissar of the ANC's military wing... Make is a senior commander of that wing... Meli is the editor of Sechaba, the ANC's official journal published in East Germany; and Mongalo is the official ANC representative in that satellite country.

Winnie Mandela, ANC's spokesman, has been quoted in Pravda, "The Soviet Union is a torch bearer for all our hopes and aspirations... the land of the Soviets is the genuine friend and ally of all people fighting against dark forces of world reaction."

THE CIA LIST of pro-Soviet ANC leaders also includes Mzwai Piliso of the Afro-Asian Peoples Solidarity Organization; James Stuart of the World Federation of Trade Unions, based in Prague; and Thabo Mbeki of the World Federation of Democratic Youth; also S. Maharja, an Indian South African Communist Party official; and Stephen Diamini.

My information on Piliso is that he is a special aide to Oliver Tambo, ANC's chief spokesman in Zambia; Stuart is also at Tambo's headquarters; Mbeki is ANC's Secretary of Information; and Maharja is a member of the political arm, Umkhonto we Sizwe; and Diamini is president of the South African Communist Party's labor front, South African Congress of Trade Unions (SACTU).

I understand that of the 30 members of ANC's National Committee, the following are also members of the South African Communist Party: Henry Makgothi, secretary of the ANC Education Department; John Nkadimenj, chief secretary of SACTU and chairman of the ANC's political committee; Aziz Pahad, ANC's representative in London; Reg September, formerly of the ANC's London office, now in Zambia; and Dan Tiome, ANC's deputy secretary general and deputy treasurer general.

AS FOR OLIVER TAMBO, the front man for the ANC based in Zambia, he hardly conceals his Soviet allegiance. For instance, he said "There is going to be more bloodshed and the whole country will be involved. The Soviet Union will give us what the West does not want to give us, namely weapons." Actually, the U.S.S.R. has been arming the ANC for years.

The African National Congress makes no effort to conceal its reliance on violence or its allegiance to world communism.

When I was in the region last year, 500 ANC guerrillas were being trained in Angola by Soviet and East German officers. Others were being trained in Mozambique, a Soviet surrogate. And in 1982, many others were being trained by the PLO in Lebanon — all with Soviet weaponry.

THESE ARE JUST A FEW of the facts about the African National Congress, whose members too many unsuspecting Americans see as noble fighters for freedom and justice.

—Mr. Morris has been a newspaper reporter, a teacher, an attorney, a judge and president of two universities. He served as counsel to three U.S. Senate Committees and is today chairman of the National Committee to Restore Internal Security. An author, columnist and lecturer, he lives in Mantoloking, N.J. FBI agents warn of South Africa hit squads

ByaJEFF STEIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) FBI agents have repeatedly warned black South African anti-apartheid activists in the United States that they may be targets of "hit squads" dispatched by the Pretoria government to attack them, according to the activists and their American lawyers.

The point-blank killing in Paris last week of a senior official of the African National Congress, Pretoria's main guerrilla foe, has lent new credibility and urgency to the FBI warnings, most of them said.

But the activists, black South Africans based in Washington and New York, also said they were wary of FBI requests for personal meetings because they feared the agents' real intent was to gather information on their political activities and possibly pass it to the white minority regime.

The ANC, founded in 1912 to oppose Pretoria's policy of racial separation known as apartheid, has close links with the South African Communist Party. It took up armed struggle in 1960 and has an office in New York and members across the United States.

The activists said their warnings from the FBI began last fall and have continued into last week. One of the agents they said had called them was confirmed by the FBI's Washington field office as an employee.

Jack Terrell, a former U.S.-based mercenary who trained Nicaragua's Contra rebels in 1984 and 1985, also told United Press International in a recent interview that South African intelligence agents had asked him to form an eight-man "hit-team."

Terrell said that he was to be used to target ANC sympathizers in the United States for assassination. Terrell said he had numerous conversations with the agents in late 1985 or early 1986, but ultimately decided against taking part. He said he later disclosed the offer to FBI agents during an interrogation in July 1986.

Brigadier Leon Mallet, South Africa's spokesman on law and order, said last week that charges of South Africa carrying out overseas assassination operations were "ridiculous and far-fetched." Other Pretoria officials, who normally do not comment on any national security matters, were not available for comment during the long Easter weekend.

The ANC's Washington representative, Dumi Matabana said, "On September 10th last year, two FBI agents came to me and said they were suspicious that South Africa might have sent hit squads into the country and therefore I should be careful about my movements."

"He told me that if I see any cars following me or people following me, I should report it to them."

Nomande Ngubu, a South African employee of the United Mine Workers Union in Washington who has been active in the anti-apartheid movement, said she also was called by an FBI agent on several occasions beginning last year.

"They said they just wanted to talk to me," she said. "They alluded to something about my own protection."

Ms. Ngubu said she turned down the request and called her Washington lawyer, immigration specialist Michael Maggio.

Maggio said that since then, FBI agent Paul Scoliano has been "calling (him) everyday for weeks" about Ms. Ngubu, a graduate of Indiana University of Pennsylvania in Indiana, Pa.

"He claims he's looking to protect her against attacks on her from representatives of the apartheid regime," Maggio said. "He said they were concerned about guys who wanted to hurt the (ANC) people and wanted to talk about it."

"I'm skeptical because I've dealt with these (FBI) guys for years," he said. "My experience is that they're looking to investigate the people they say they want to protect."

Maggio said he asked the agent to talk with his client only in his office but they had yet to arrange an appointment. Scoliano did not return telephone calls to his office.

FBI spokeswoman Barbara Wallace said bureau policy was not to comment on its operations but added, "If some activists thought we were using them to gather information and pass that information along, that is totally erroneous."

A similar warning was passed last November to ANC supporter Kenneth Mokoena, a South African scholar at the National Security Archives, a Washington research organization.

Mokoena said he was advised "South African intelligence people have slipped into the country, and people involved in activities against South Africa should take extra precautions because we don't know what they are up to."

Mokoena said he "had mixed feelings" about the warning. "One, it could've been an effort to get (anti-apartheid activists) to stop their activities and to operate in an atmosphere of fear. And two, there was the remote possibility they could be coming here and could harm you."

"My feeling is always that those people (South African agents) are capable of anything. I've never underestimated them."

In recent weeks, South Africa has stepped up commando raids against ANC offices in neighboring African countries, in some cases killing suspected members of the anti-apartheid organization.

Mokoena also alleged that three of Pretoria's agents were enrolled at Indiana University to spy on dissident South African blacks when he was a student there between 1978 and 1982. He said one of them was positively identified by an estranged wife back home. South African Embassy employees often show up to take notes at anti-apartheid rallies and meetings, Mokoena and others said.

Washington attorney Allan Ebert, who represents Olive Shisana, head of the Women's Division of the ANC in the United States, said his client has reported several suspicious incidents recently.

"Strange things have been happening to her and her husband. The telephone has been cutting off and on. Sometimes there will be no mail for a week, then a whole bundle. There have also been several officious-looking men hanging out in a car in front of her house."

An FBI source with experience in foreign intelligence liaison matters said FBI agents may well be collecting information on exile activists allied with the ANC.

But he said that if South Africa were discovered sending its agents to the United States without official authorization, administration officials would protest to Pretoria.

The New York Times reported in 1986 that the FBI regularly sends intelligence reports to Pretoria on the U.S. activities of the ANC.

And in passing anti-apartheid sanctions against South Africa in 1986, Congress directed the Justice Department to investigate possible communist influences on the ANC in the United States and whether its members should register as foreign agents.

The ANC's observer mission at the United Nations has been the constant target of "threats, death threats, obscene calls, defacement of our doors and political vandalism," ANC representative Neo Nomzana said in an interview.

He said FBI agents had telephoned ANC representatives at home to warn them of possible South African operations against them.

"It's very strange," he said. "One would think they would call the office to tell us to warn all of our people" instead of placing separate calls outside the office.

But Randall Robinson, head of TransAfrica, a Washington-based foreign policy think tank said, "After what happened in Paris this week, I wouldn't be surprised about anything."
